

Isis and Your Creator

September 30, 1997

This is Isis. Your Creator is young, as creators go. This is why your Creator would even consider taking on such a project as the Explorer Race. Older, more experienced creators did not take up the idea, much less even consider becoming responsible for it, because it is such a commitment. But because this Creator is young, like the young everywhere, youthful enthusiasm allowed him to become excited about the project. To do something new and exciting is always the venue of the young.

Your Creator

So when the choice was made, it was necessary for this Creator to have a great deal of advice and advisors, for He could have easily become distracted with the many variables associated with creating a replacement during the time and place of your creation. Replacements for Creators are not rare, but one does not usually create one's own replacement in the same area as one's creation. If you do, most likely it will be a duplicate of yourself. The only way to avoid that is to ask for assistance and to have very little control or personal involvement with your replacement-to-be.

Your Creator is very hands-on, so to give up involvement was not a real option. The only way to keep your Creator from accidentally meddling too much here in this universe was to give Him assistance from creators beyond this realm. I was perhaps the most active participant. The other two mentioned [Creator's father and the Creator of Creators] also participated because there had been some familiarity, some contact with these beings and your Creator before, so that was comforting. There had been only distant contact between this Creator and myself, so my involvement allowed me to be the unknown to this Creator, which is very advantageous if you wish to be influential, as I did. Being a mystery somewhat myself, it caused this Creator here to be sufficiently intrigued so as to accept an unnatural state of condition for Itself. You must remember that this Creator is above all curious. And being young amplifies the curiosity.

So it was necessary for me to be enigmatic. This served or fed this Creator's curiosity while not necessarily giving Him too many answers. In this way I was able to support and sustain this Creator's goals, yet not become directly involved with the project. I felt it was necessary for me to have some distance. So when this Creator requested outside input to the Explorer Race, I was able to provide direct input to the beings of the Explorer Race.

Instead of bringing a cord only, as described by Zoosh, I brought the cord and also myself. Because this Creator was interested in the way I conducted myself then, I was welcomed in this creation. So I sent a portion of myself here while retaining the larger portion of me beyond this level, as you say.

As a portion of myself here, I was able to provide a bias to each and every immortal personality that arrived in this creation (not before your arrival, but when you arrived here). This means that all of your immortal personalities, in any of their incarnations in this universe, would be biased toward functioning in the most benevolent way, yet be dedicated to the Explorer Race project. This was necessary, because being involved in the Explorer Race project as a fleeting experience—coming and then going, perhaps to another universe—could possibly despoil the other universe, because you are all of what you are when you go elsewhere and it was essential to limit the impact of such Explorer Race lessons to this universe alone.

So I added that bias. Although it did not sequester immortal personalities to only this universe, if it was in their favor or providential to go to other universes for other lives, they would leave. As one would go through a veil, they would leave all their Explorer Race experience here, making certain lives unavailable to them in incarnations beyond this universe.

These immortal personalities accepted this essentially blank spot (not a real limit) in their access to their lives as a commitment to this worthy experiment here. As a result, even if they were beyond this universe [chuckles], since they could not access the lives here involved in the Explorer Race, it would create a curiosity—a tension, as it were.

Imagine yourself in another universe in a life there. You would examine your lives, as is typical in other places, and there would be blank spots. You could tell that a life had existed but it was otherwise unavailable to you. You would consult with your teachers, your guides, all those who helped you, and everyone without exception would say, “Yes, there was a life, but it is there unavailable to you where you are now, though it may be available to you to examine some other time.” That’s all they really could say (“some other time” meaning, of course, should they return to this universe for some other incarnation). I don’t have to tell you what attention that would create, especially for the very curious.

This was also intentional, so that the investors (for that is what they truly are, those who would participate in the Explorer Race grand experiment) who would do so would be inclined to invest more and not less.

Some individuals, as you know, have had only one Explorer Race life, but this is rare. It is usually at least three and sometimes many more—and that is because of this tension. It is not true tension as in a mechanical tension. But for any curious being, to be unable to examine in detail a life in the way you examined so many others would create a definite longing or urge to know.

This is what I added to the Explorer Race. I have always believed that in order to accomplish anything, the first and foremost necessity is commitment. If anything worthwhile is to be accomplished, you must be absolutely committed to the goals of that accomplishment. If you are not committed, the chances of that goal or effort achieving its desired success are sufficiently reduced. You know this.

The Rise of the Feminine Energy

Can you tell us about your involvement within the Explorer Race as the goddess in all of our legends and our myths and our religions? Can you talk about your activities here?

There is a whole book here at least, maybe three. I will touch on it lightly. Sometime in the future we can begin projects. I can talk at length about many things. Perhaps a series of two or three books might be acceptable?

Oh yes, please.

A nutshell, yes? My involvement here with the Explorer Race to support and establish and nurture the divine feminine was initially a direct desire within myself to support and nurture the value of the feminine anywhere. But secondarily, it is in homage to those who have chosen to have physical lives on the star system Sirius.

Sirius is the most important location in this universe of the feminine energy. It is committed absolutely to spreading the value of the feminine energy to all points that desire it in this universe. It is the source in this universe of such energy. And because of the request by the elders there, I was invited to participate fully. Moving with you through your locations as the Explorer Race, I have very gradually infused the feminine energy.

There was a time when the feminine energy was less welcome. This is when you were beginning to experiment with and pursue the ideals of polarity. Yes, polarity has ideals as well as challenges. The ideals are simply that polarity can offer an absolute understanding in a sequential manner of the value and differentiation of the masculine, of the feminine and a polarity (which you are not experiencing now) of the combined masculine-feminine.

This experience of the combined masculine-feminine is in fact a polarity, because when the masculine-feminine are combined, they are each distinctly themselves. It is not a polarity when the masculine and feminine are blended, but when they are distinctly each and only themselves but combined, this is in fact a polarity. You are not experiencing that at this time, for it would be too confusing. But you will; it is a step on the way.

Is it what Zoosh has called the third sex?

Yes. I was then for a time a little more distant from you, as you were exploring the polarization of the masculine regardless of what sex you were. But considering the fact that all of you without exception started as primarily feminine energies—yes, every single being who has ever manifested as the Explorer Race started out as a primarily feminine being—most of you had only this energy. Some of you had some slight degree of masculine energy, but it would not be possible for you to answer the call to become part of the Explorer Race if your energy was more masculine than feminine, because the masculine energy is predominantly involved in self-destiny. With self-destiny one tends to create one's destiny directly, hands-on. It does not necessarily mean control, but self-intent. With the feminine energy, destiny is associated almost exclusively with allowance, and allowance has attraction as an absolute ability. One can attract or be attracted. The reason that you were all attracted to the Explorer Race and were able to come here (mechanically speaking) is because you were primarily feminine.

Now, while you worked your way through the experience of the Explorer Race, there were times when you gradually became more masculine and less feminine. It was during one of these times, especially when many of you were manifesting on Orion, that I pulled back a bit and was not as involved. That is not to say that there was anything wrong with Orion in these times, but it was a time of the exploration of destiny on the level of adventure, something which is at this time on your Earth again somewhat in existence.

I remained a little bit at a distance for most of you. Then as you began to move from Orion through various brief stops and ultimately to Earth, who is a fine teacher for you all, I was able to infuse more of the feminine energy. I will be very active with you, and I have been since about the late 1800s. I will continue to step up my activity with you, because as your time goes on, in 25 years or so the willful destiny of the masculine energy will begin to fall away and the acceptance of destiny from attraction will become more appealing to the masculine energy.

This will also be seen by most beings in spiritual circles as a leap of faith. During this time of the leap of faith a great deal will be accomplished, because when there is a leap of faith like this, there is no resistance. And when there is no resistance, a great deal can be accomplished in such a brief moment as to be less than one measurable second. This is likely to happen in 25 years. It may take as long as 35 years, but I don't think so.

The feminine energy, then, for many beings is rising. This is perhaps most significantly available to those who are feminine (women), but it is surprisingly available to men as well. You will find that men who utilize and know how to utilize the energy of attraction will become much more common amongst you. They will often be spiritual men, but sometimes just average citizens, and they will be able to use this energy in the most benevolent way.

Isis and Mother Mary

Is what we call Mother Mary's energy connected to you?

What you call Mother Mary is directly connected to me. Mother

Mary is not so much a person, in the story that you have come to know in the Christian religion, as what I would prefer to call, in the Russian terminology, an icon—meaning someone who is beyond that by which she is normally identified. Mother Mary is a cousin, a direct connection to me. Her true participation in those times was as a teacher, as a student, as one who performs the benediction.

I don't know if you're familiar so much with this term. It is usually associated with religion, but a benediction is not just a prayer one says over one's followers or one's family. It is truly associated with initiation. The term benediction has come to be used instead of initiation but initiation is perhaps a better term. Mother Mary, then, is involved directly with initiation, to the point of focus associated with the true divine feminine.

You have an all-encompassing knowledge of much beyond what we have reached so far. Correct?

I have some secrets. I might not be able to reveal them all to you, but I will reveal what I can.

Wonderful. Robert is perfectly comfortable channeling you, right?

Yes, at the moment. But in the future it will require more of my energy coming through, so we will have to step him up a bit.

Thank you so much.

Goodnight.

And see you again.

Yes—and benevolence.
